

Artsområde Fiskemåse

The image is an aerial photograph of a landscape, likely a coastal or riverine area, overlaid with various planning and zoning boundaries. A prominent red line network crisscrosses the terrain, representing property or administrative boundaries. A large, irregularly shaped area is shaded in a dark green color, indicating a specific planning zone. Within this dark green area, there are several callout boxes with white text. To the right of the dark green area, a larger region is shaded in a lighter green color with a fine grid pattern, representing a different type of natural area. The background shows a mix of forested land and open fields, with a dark water body visible on the right side of the frame.
